Alternatively dubbed the "Golden Girl" and "America's Sweetheart," 16-year-old Great Neck NY native Sarah Hughes has stunned and seduced the world with her come-from-behind gold medal in women's figure skating in the 2002 Winter Olympics. The public loves her mop of red hair, her cheery smile, her chipper voice, and, most of all, her role as Michelle in the hit teen movies The Hot Chick and Mean Girls.

Hughes is the master of surprise. Who would have expected it when, as a newcomer to the Olympics and lagging behind Michelle Kwan, Irina Slutskaya and Sasha Cohen, Hughes would have won the gold medal? And, alternatively, who would have suspected it in her first interview, when she transformed before our eyes from a dorky, awkward, band-camp loving weirdo into a perverted nymphomaniac?

"Yeah, it was really funny," says Hughes of her transformation on the ice. "It reminded me of this one time, in band camp, where we were in a competition and our group totally thought we'd lose, 'cause like, we were up against these really good other groups, but then, like, we played really well and the other groups didn't and we won! I couldn't believe it! This was just like that one time. In band camp."

In much the same way Hughes delighted and terrified Jason Biggs at the end of her interview with her sudden sexual appetite, she held the same effect upon the United States, silver-medalist Slutskaya and bronze-medalist and favorite-to-win Michelle Kwan at the medals ceremony.

"Say my name, bitch!" Hughes commanded a visibly-shaken Kwan, who stammered, "S-Sarah" before Hughes permitted Ottavio Cinquanta, head of the International Skating Union, to bestow the medal upon Kwan.

"God, that was so fun!" exclaimed Hughes after the ceremony, afterwards running off to spend some 'alone time' with her beloved flute. Jason Biggs was spotted in the audience of the arena during the ceremony, who, having decided to spurn the advances of Slovakian sizzler and exchange student Nadia, chose the bubbly, perky, sexually educated and promiscuous Hughes as his girlfriend. Biggs was later seen attempting to fornicate with a Zamboni machine.

Also spotted in the crowd were Seann William Scott, imbibing some sort of bodily fluid, Eddie Kaya Thomas who was obviously seducing Scott's older, but still attractive, mother, and Chris Klein and Mena Suvari, who really didn't have much to say and were pretty boring.

Now that the Olympics are over, Hughes has decided to take a break from ice skating and return to high school in Michigan, continue to exasperate, baffle, and seduce Jason Biggs with her constantly evolving personality, film the third edition of _____, and enjoy the constant rotation of _____ and _____ in countless VCRS in college dorms across the country.

God bless America. And God bless Sarah Hughes. She certainly is a Golden Girl. And one perverted band-camp nerd.
